

Psychological and Mental Profile of Carrie-Anne Ridsdale

1. Mental and Psychological Observations

A. Presentation of Grandiosity and Delusions of Importance

- Frequent references to being targeted by "haters" and dramatic comparisons to Britney Spears and the paparazzi may signal delusions of grandeur or narcissistic traits.
- She asserts she can sue individuals for using her trademark and is being paid by Facebook, emphasizing her own importance repeatedly, suggesting self-aggrandizing behavior.

B. Disorganized and Tangential Speech

- The transcript contains numerous non-sequiturs, rapid topic changes, and repetitive language ("it's a blue sky day", tangents about toilets, food, McDonald's).
- This may indicate pressured speech, possible mania or hypomania, or mild disorganization, often observed in bipolar disorder or certain personality disorders.

C. Lack of Insight and Impulsivity

- Live streaming while driving demonstrates poor judgment and risk-taking behavior.
- Casual attitude towards child welfare policies ("the child has to be present") and legality ("they could say I'm using a dead person's name... doesn't matter") suggests lack of insight into ethical and legal boundaries.

D. Paranoia and Externalization

- Mentions of ongoing threats, "lives being destroyed," and plans to "come after" critics reflect paranoid ideation.
- Blames "haters" for many of her problems; refuses accountability or introspection.

E. Manic or Hypomanic Indicators (Potentially)

- Euphoric and animated mood.
 - Rapid flow of ideas and speech.
 - Unrealistic business expansion plans, e.g., needing "pump trucks", more shops, and warehouses—without clear structure.
-

Legal Violations and Risky Conduct (UK Law)

1. Dangerous Driving / Careless Driving

- Offense: Live-streaming while driving is potentially a criminal offense under the Road Traffic Act 1988.
- Risk: Use of mobile phone while driving can fall under Section 41D, which includes using a handheld device while in control of a vehicle.

2. Fraud and Misrepresentation (Potentially)

- If the “charity” is unregistered and solicits donations under false pretenses, this may constitute:
 - Fraud by false representation (Fraud Act 2006, Section 2).
 - Operating a fraudulent business under the Companies Act 2006 or Charities Act 2011.
- Claims such as proceeds going to a “baby bank” or use of a deceased person's identity (“using a dead person's name”) could warrant investigation.

3. Trademark Misuse / Defamation Threats

- Threats to sue others for “breaching my trademark” may be legally unfounded, and using these claims to intimidate could constitute harassment or even malicious communications under the Communications Act 2003.

4. Data Protection / GDPR Issues

- If she publicly names individuals or shares personal data without consent during her livestreams or posts, she could be violating GDPR (UK).

5. Charity Law Non-Compliance

- The Charity Commission for England and Wales requires transparency, annual reporting, and proper registration for charitable operations.
- Running what appears to be a “fake charity shop” and using donations for unclear purposes could prompt regulatory action.

Summary Profile

Trait	Indicators
Narcissistic tendencies	Grandiosity, sense of uniqueness, entitlement, focus on public image.
Possible mania/hypomania	Rapid speech, impulsive behavior, inflated self-esteem, pressured ideas.
Poor judgment and risk-taking	Live streaming while driving, erratic planning, disregard for regulation.
Paranoia and hostility	References to being targeted, seeking vengeance, "taking people down".
Ethical/legal ambiguity	Casual mentions of using false identities, legal threats without basis.

Source:

Video: <https://jaynesbabybank.co.uk/wp-content/uploads/2025/05/Bristol-Supercut.mp4>

Transcript: https://jaynesbabybank.co.uk/wp-content/uploads/2025/05/Bristol_Supercut.txt